| Written comments: | How does anyone justify moving water from one county to another? Where is the logic in this? At a time when aquifer levels are dropping what sense does it make to divert water from agriculture to watering city lawns? This feels like a water grab from a less populated, less politically connected location to another and does not make sense for the use of our natural resources. I am also concerned about the sustainability of the proposal. It seems that the logical progression of this is water usage creep by the cities at the expense of the agricultural sector. I am certainly not in favor of it and would vote against any administration that would allow it. |
